PEACE COLLEGE

The Peace College Experience --a journey of self discovery. We arrive, fresh from high school, nervous and eager to embark on new challenges and eager in our quest to become spiritually and intellectually independent. Our time here, as with all life, has been on a continuum, discovering parts of ourselves and searching for the answers, and, in the process, enduring adversities, but turning those trials into achievements. Like the bud that eternally becomes the rose, we too bloom in our own time and by our expression become a part of the cycle of Peace College traditions. In the end, we will remember our years at Peace as a small part of the greater journey through life. These years will support us and carry us through our joys and sorrows forever.

continuum

IS THIS THE WRITE WAY?

On the hot Sunday afternoon of July 30, 1995, eighty-seven girls moved into Finley Residence Hall for the two week Summer Writing Institute. Little did they know that it would be the start of two vigorous weeks of writing. During those two weeks the students wrote extensively on many topics, visited museums and attended church at Duke Chapel. The schedule was rigorous. Wake-up call began at 7:00 a.m. for "Feeling Fit" before breakfast. Students did get a break on weekends to go to movies, shopping, or to the Reba McEntire concert.

These two weeks gave some Peace freshmen a taste of college life while learning how to live with others without the stress of a full academic load. When time came to depart, each student had a sore hand, many new friends, but knew Peace was the "write" way!

Jenny Perkins, Ashley Farland, June Avery Capps, Mary Kathryn Tyson, Meredith Royall, and Jill Thigpin relax in the parlor of first floor Finley after writing many papers the first week of the Writing Institute.

SUMMER WRITING

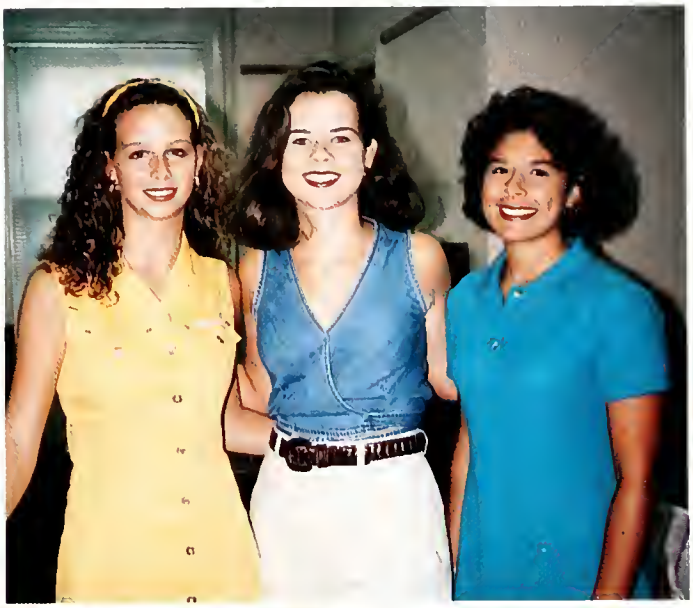
Kelly Dowd dresses up as her favorite late night talk show host, David Letterman, during skit night.

Allison Clifton, Ashley Roberts, and Marci Sample get all dolled up for a girls' night out.



Heidi Plemmons, the resident assistant on first floor Finley, tries her best to imitate Marilyn Monroe during a late night.

Greer Suttle finally gets her chance to talk on the phone after waiting in line to use the one phone per hall.

All decked out and ready to go to the beach, Faye Landis, Jennifer Raynor, and Claudia Maihold prepare to perform their skit.

Traditions

This year, as in 123 years before, convocation of the Freshman Class was the first Thursday of the academic year.

A long-standing tradition at Peace College, the 124th convocation was held on August 24, the first Thursday of the school year. The faculty, adorned in their finest academic regalia, along with student body officers, took their places on the stage of the Recital Hall opposite the Freshman Class of 1997.

"I think it gives freshmen the opportunity to be recognized and introduced to the faculty and administration," said Lindsey Tyler, who took part in convocation last year.

"It was fun to get the freshman class together as a whole and to see everyone dressed up in their white dresses and to realize that girls before you in past years experienced the same thing you are experiencing," said Becky Casto, freshman.

The speaker, Dr. Patricia A. Sullivan, the first female chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, said "I'm not sure about what lies ahead. But one thing I'm fairly sure of -- we will need able and enthusiastic leaders as we've never needed them before, and you're really here to become educated women and take your place as leaders in our society," she said. "I think there are other kinds of leaders, less celebrated in the past, less well-known, who are also leaders. Many leaders conduct their work without popularity and recognition."

Following the ceremony, students headed for Peace Beach for a Texas-style barbeque where the Christian rock band Crossroads played. Then, activities sponsored by Peace Student Recreation Association tested students' cowgirl talents. Students participated in relays involving a watermelon seed-spitting contest, a "horse" roping contest, and a watergun shooting contest.

Officers of clubs and other student organizations take their place on the stage with the faculty and administration during convocation.

The speaker at convocation , Dr. Patricia A. Sullivan, the first female chancellor at UNC-G challenges the freshman class: "I think you young women will also be leaders and that you will find your own way to express your leadership talents," she said.

The students of second floor Finley Hall pause after convocation to remember the event. These friends will never forget their year together that followed this ceremony.

At the Texas-style barbeque that fol-lowed convocation, sophomores Cara Hardister and Angie Ward enjoy barbeque sandwiches and lemonade while listening to Crossroads, a Christian rock band.

Selena Draper puts on her little red dress and curls her hair to go to Raleigh's Club Marzz.

Nancy Smith and her boyfriend spend time together while watching the NC State vs. Marshall game from "the hill."

The Lawn Party was a big success once again this year even though Peace women had to brave the pouring rain.

ALL LIT UP

What do Peace women do for fun? Because Peace is an all female college, some people think students do not have a social life, - especially one that includes guys.

But women at Peace do have many options to choose from when they decide to take a break from their academic life. Some students attend mixers at fraternity court, go to college night at local clubs, or attend concerts and discover unique coffee houses and restaurants.

During the first month of classes, Peace students have mixers with NCSU in Belk courtyard. Throughout the year fraternities sponsor mixers featuring local bands.

The Raleigh-Chapel Hill area serves as a prime location for outstanding concerts such as the Horde Festival, Hootie and the Blowfish, Tom Petty, REM, and Boys II Men. If a concert is not scheduled, many local dance clubs are frequented for a night of dancing. Clubs such as Club Marzz and the New Bar play music ranging from techno to disco and top forty.

Attending college in a metropolitan area provides college students with social and cultural activities. By attending concerts, dance clubs, fraternity parties, relaxing dinners, and coffee houses, Peace students enjoy a well-deserved break from their studies.

Peace students dance the night away at a local club.

Freshman students attend services every Thursday at 3:45 in the James Dinwiddie Chapel.

Rev. Thomas and Lee Ann Brown enjoy a relaxing chat after religion class.

Rev. Laurie McNeill, a Peace alumnus, and several students gather after a religious enrichment service.

CHAPEL

Climbing the wooden stairwell and walking through the arched doorway leading to the Chapel, one can feel a sense of tranquility. It is a peaceful time for reflection and prayer.

Chaplain Ann Laird Jones, spiritual advisor to Peace College, Linda Sparrow, PSCA director, Dean Edwards and Rev. Allen Proctor, NCSU Presbyterian campus minister, join forces to provide students with spiritual opportunities on campus.

Becky Casto, Merry Craig Belton, and Amber Leuliette intensely search for the moves that will untangle their team's intricate human pretzel during the ice breakers at Thursday night's festivities.

At the big sister-little sister lunch, Kristina Feldstine tells her little sister, Leah Blanchard, about all of her memorable moments here at Peace!

After passing the orange, by neck onto her teammate, Leslie Eden falls to the ground, laughing hysterically.

Do you trust me?", seems to be the question Diana Warner and Lea Ann Oakes ask as they join a circle of girls sitting on one anothers' laps.

BIG SIS-

little sis

Saying "good-bye" to all of the familiarities of home can be stressful on just about anyone. For college freshmen, who have left family and friends behind, life can turn into an emotional roller coaster. For this reason, the Peace Student Christian Association (PSCA) sponsored a Big Sister-Little Sister Program where second and third year students helped first year students adjust to Peace.

Prior to the beginning of school, the little sisters usually heard from their big sisters via mail or phone. This correspondence helped to break the ice between home and college life by ensuring that each freshman had at least one friend at Peace before move-in day. Shortly after the arrival of freshmen, big sisters stopped by their little-sisters' rooms to say, "Hi," and to bring a room-warming gift.

After the initial chaos of the school year subsided, the PSCA designated a week for the freshmen to get better aquainted with their "sisters." Big sister-little sister week, September 11th-15th, was filled with various activities. The little sisters made an engagement with their big-sisters for lunch on Monday in Belk Dining Hall. On Tuesday night a party, complete with food and ice-breakers, provided games for all of those who chose to participate. One such activity was the Orange Game. After being split into two teams, the girls sent an orange down the line by pinning the orange between their necks and chests. This game preceeded the human pretzel, which neither team could untangle. The big sisters returned the dinner invitation by asking their little sisters to join them for a formal sit-down dinner Wednesday evening. Attending Chapel together on Thursday concluded the activities organized by the PSCA.

Through this interaction between big sisters and little sisters, strong friendships were formed, making the opening of the school year easier and more fun for everyone.

Heather Medd and Diana Warner, leaders of the PSCA, get a little "fruity" as they explain the directions of the icebreakers.

No, Phelicia Cuthbertson and Ginna Bemardo are not necking in front of Dean Edwards. The orange passing icebreaker, however,does look rather intimate!

Graduation . .

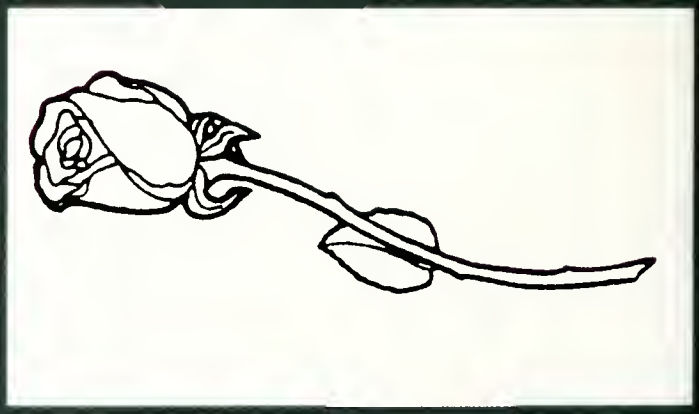
For some students the Peace College Experience begins with the Writing Institute, but for others it begins with the first day of classes. But for all, the Peace College Experience culminates when the students fullfill the requirements for the Associate of Arts Degree. Exams have been taken, and it is finally time for graduation. Wearing their formal white dresses and white gloves and carrying a bouquet of thirteen red roses, members of the graduating class proceed out of Main onto the College Green for one of the most impressive, beautiful ceremonies in the country. Then each graduate receives her diploma and white Bible with her name inscribed inside.

At the end of the ceremony, graduates circle around the Fountain and sing the Alma Mater. Finally, each woman takes a single rose from her bouquet and tosses it into the fountain, symbolizing the part of herself that she will leave at Peace forever.

Excited after graduating, Kristie Salem, shows off her diploma and her bouquet of now twelve red roses.

Caroline Owen, this past year's graduation speaker, and Ms. Adair Robertson hug each other after the ceremony.



As these Peace College students now toss their rose into the picturesque fountain, they remember how they were once freshman.

. . Our Time To Bloom

Stephanie Stewart and Jennifer McCurley embrace each other after the ceremony expressing their friendship towards one another.

Each Peace College student will remember the day in which she tosses her single rose into the fountain.

Looking through the woodwork off third Main, we see an unique view of the fountain.

Juniors, Stevie McFadden, Melissa Lancaster, Amanda Bowman and Elizabeth Babb, hang out at Barista Java to allow for some stress-free time in their day.

He's Not Just The President

Dr. Garrett Briggs has not only been the President of Peace College for the past five years, but he has been a friend to everyone that he meets. He seems to miraculously learn the majority of the students' names each year and enjoys conversing with them as he meets them around campus. At graduation, he offers members of the graduating class advice that they might be able to use in the future. Students are sometimes invited to his house for special occasions such as the Sophomore Dinner. He and his wife, Sue, are active participants in all aspects of the college.

While at the Picnic on Peace Beach, Dr. Garrett Briggs talks intensely with a student about her day at Peace.

The Peace College Experience involves a quest that stretches the mind and imagination. At Peace we become eager to Embark on a continuum of new challenges that will expose us to new heights of learning. Under the leadership of a talented faculty and with the support of a strong administration, we discover our potential and develop our academic skills to prepare ourselves for the future.

Since most of the professors at Peace require that formal papers must be typed, nine of the old computers have been added in some of the residence halls for student use if students are not able to get to the Computer Center. Computers loaded with the Internet allows students and faculty to communicate on the world wide web. # LIVING ## with a roommate

Many students had their own room when they lived at home, so adjusting to living with a roommate is a major part of their freshman year of college. Leslie Bomar thinks roommates can be a positive experience. "Always having fel- someone to talk to and getting help with homework are a few of the 'pluses," she said. Living in a dorm also helps with getting to know your low students and being aware of what is going on around campus, according to Terri Sutton. There are drawbacks, though, like sharing a phone, television, and a stereo with a roommate, not to mention sharing a bathroom with three others . And then there are the amenities we are used to that we can no longer have. Boyce Lilley said, "I hate not being able to have a [personal] microwave!"

> "I hate not being able to have a [personal]microwave!"
> -- Boyce Lilley

At home we generally seek privacy in our own rooms, but at college it is not at all uncommon to see students, like Anne Margaret Montana, carrying on telephone conversations in the hallway.

Sharing is what dorm life is all about! As suitemates, Kimberly Chappell, brushing her teeth, and Suzanne Jenkins, blowdrying her hair, have become accustomed to sharing a bathroom.

I'm going home for the weekend has an underlined meaning... "LAUNDRY TIME!" Carey Dawson and her laundry filled basket head home for the weekend!

the grades

One of the biggest differences between high school and college is the contrast in work loads. Not only does college require more out-of-class work, but the work is also harder. ● Rachel McPherson said, "The study hours are unreal. I never thought I would actually study three hours per night, per class." ● According to Meredith Broome, "Studying all the information required for a test or quiz" was the hardest thing to adjust to. Likewise, "having to study more and spend more time on homework" was the toughest aspect for Kelly Worsley. ● Additionally, most freshmen do not feel that high school adequately prepared them for what college requires. ●Rachel said, "I feel I have adjusted well....When I have ever gotten 'side-tracked' teachers are always there to offer extra support. I think getting involved is the key to doing well academically because it helps me stay focused."

BEING
away from home

College is a time of adjustment, for growing up and moving out, for being away from family and friends, and for living on one's own. ● For some young women, like Lindsay Wetmore, Kimberly Shay, and Erin Rennie, the adjustment was also moving out-of-state, and leaving their families a few states behind. ● Lindsay, from Seattle, Washington, came to Peace "because I thought it would be a great stepping stone to get into UNC-Chapel Hill from out-of-state. A lot of my friends from home wanted to go to UNC, but I was the only one who got the opportunity to pursue it." ● There are other reasons that students came from out-of-state to Peace. ● Erin, from Florida, said, "My grandparents live in Chapel Hill, and they brought me to Peace in between my freshman and sophomore years [of high school]. I fell in love and from that moment on, I was a Peace student."

> "From that moment on, I was a Peace student."
> Erin Rennie

Before she left her home in Seattle, Washington, Lindsay Wetmore and some family members had a going away party. Lindsay would not be able to come home until Christmas break.

RUNNING for office

Freshman Class Officers: Lauren Miller, Secretary/Treasurer, Jenny Clark, President, and Alison Baker, Vice President

Mid-October marked the time for freshman class elections. When the votes were tallied Jenny Clark earned enough votes to secure the position of president, as did Lauren Miller for secretary. A recount of the votes for vice-president determined that Alison Baker had a slight lead over her opponent. Each student had her own reasons for running for class office. Jenny ran "because I've never been president of anything, only other offices. I just wanted to see what it would be like, and it sounded like a fun job." Alison and Lauren both said they love being involved. "I want to serve as a spokesperson for the Freshman class. I want to be involved in school activities and get other people involved also," said Alison.

EXPERIENCE THE FEELING AT PEACE

Get Involved! Find your Place! Become a Leader! All Peace students bring to college unique skills and talents to help them become involved in organizations and to assume leadership roles. Some find their places at Peace quickly, and some take their time to Discover their own gifts.

Once involved, the Peace College Experience takes hold, and the student feels a part of the college community. On the continuum of discovery, one may drift toward government or religious activities or become a political activist. Others claim the environment as their cause and work to improve the community at large. Whatever roles students take, they will find support, friends, leadership potential, and possible keys to their future.

Organizations

P S G A

Peace Student Government Association involves the student body in activities. The PSGA officers are elected each spring by the student body and serve the following year. They organize a variety of events such as Mother-Daughter Weekend, Father-Daughter Weekend, and Big Sister-Little Sister week which give Peace women the opportunity to get to know each other better and involve their families in their college life. Fall activities such as the Fall Cocktail, Halloween Costume Contest, Derby Days, and Fall Fest Week make the fall semester busy for the student body. Karen Bass, director of student activities, organizes the events throughout the year. PSGA is also important in promoting understanding and cooperation between students, faculty, and administration.

ation Association allows students opportunities to have recreation outside of the traditional team sports. The officers find activities to attract students. For example, the Carolina vs. NC State Powder Puff Football Game brings together fans of both teams to decide who has more spirit. Several times during each semester, students are grouped according to academic advisors to compete in intramural games against Faculty/Staff. Other activities of the PSRA are the Turkey Trot, midnight ice skating, indoor soccer games, board games, indoor basketball games, and a volleyball mixer.

The PSRA co-sponsored a Fun Run around the Peace campus last spring. The race attracted dozens of Peace students.

The Peace Student Christian Association Cabinet

The Peace Student Christian Association enables students to develop their spititual lives at Peace College. The club stays busy throughout the year making Thanksgiving baskets; running the Bloodmobile; working with Loaves and Fishes, a community outreach program at the First Presbyterian Church; and Building Together, a ministry to people in Halifax Court and the surrounding communities. As a group, the Peace Student Christian Association provides students with opportunities to enrich their spiritual lives during their college career.

The Chapel Liaison Committee is made up of students who coordinate and evaluate chapel programs. Every April they hold Religious Enrichment Week, which enables alumnae to come back and participate in chapel. This past year Reverend Laurie McNeil spoke to the Peace congregation. This committee also coordinates special events such as the Christmas Pagent. Reverend Ann Laird Jones coordinates chapel services to include students as ushers, liturgists and acolytes.

Human Resources Society

The introduction of the Human Resources Society has been received with great interest from the student population, both those who wish to major in the H. R. program and others who want to benefit from the workshops held by the organization. The purpose of the H. R. Society is to demonstrate to students that career opportunities do exist where students can apply their psychology to business skills.

Besides offering speakers that cover topics varying from sexual harrassment to interviewing potential employees, the H.R. Society also takes trips into the career field. In the early fall, they traveled to a manufacturing plant in Benson, N.C. to help in gathering feedback from employee survey results.

Dr. Lynn Summers carefully explains the elements needed in a resume to an interested group of students.

Each member of the society served on a committee ranging from lining up speakers to planning the organization's activities. The Human Resourses Society allowed students to participate in events related to their future careers.

Psychology Club

Dr. Korrel Kanoy set up the Psychology Club at Peace in order to provide students with information about psychology as a possible career option. Through various workshops, including such speakers as Bette Bucci from INTERACT, students had the opportunity to gain insight into the implementation of psychology in the realm of real life. The club also provided the chance for students to explore possible employment after graduation as well as finding out about different graduate school programs related to the field.

Rotaract

Members of Rotaract: Jennifer Price, Kelly Clary, Fran Miller, Venera Ishmuratova, Katy Shannafield, Sara Cottingham, Renee Frye, Mary Stewart Turner, Meredith Royall, Jessica Raye, David McLennan (advisor), Petrina Williams, Sharon Mooring, and Katy Moerman.

Sponsored by local Rotary clubs, the development of Roteract gave college students the opportunity to perform service projects at the city, state, national, and international levels. Roteract has spread into seventy countries and entered the Peace College community in September.

Roteract International set up specific goals for the organization to help young people mature into responsible citizens of society. According to the informational literature about Roteract, these goals also include: "To recognize and develop leadership and personal integrity; to encourage and practice thoughtfulness of and helpfulness to others; to build respect for the rights of others, based on recognition of the worth of each individual; to emphasize acceptance of individual responsibility as the basis of personal success, community improvement, and group achievement; to recognize the dignity and value of all useful occupations as opportunities for increasing knowledge and understanding of community, national, and world affairs; and to open avenues of personal and group action leading to the advancement of international understanding and good will towards all peoples."

Roteract planned and executed many service projects in the course of the initial year. Besides working in some of the booths at the International Festival held in downtown Raleigh in October, this group of Peace students helped to raise money for Habitat for Humanity and collected canned foods for the Food Bank of North Carolina. One important project slated for future pursuit entails helping the spider monkeys of Punta Laguna. The group designed a coloring book to help raise funds for these Mexican primates.

Roteract did not stop at service projects for the community. This group also offered scholarships to study abroad for a year through the local Rotary club sponsor. Interested students, in the spring of their junior year, filled out an application that first went through the local community before being sent through the applicant's college. Each applicant will find out if she has been chosen during her senior year. Some of the criteria for acceptance include public speaking abilities, extra-curricular activities, grade-point average, and involvement in the community.

Goals:

To develop leadership and personal integrity; to build respect for the rights of others, based on recognition of the worth of each individual; to emphasize acceptance of individual responsibility as the basis of personal success, community improvement, and group achievement; to open avenues of personal and group action leading to the advancement of international understanding and good will towards all peoples.

Daughters and Granddaughters

The Daughters and Grand daughters club is a very special organization at Peace College. This group shares a bond with mothers, grandmothers, and even great-grandmothers who attended Peace. The tradition of attending Peace can be carried on from generation to generation. One of the club's yearly activities is decorating the Christmas tree in Main Parlor with pictures of current sophomores at Peace. Mothers and grandmothers enjoy attending this event as it brings back memories of their times at Peace.

PRESIDENT'S AIDES

The President's Aides consist of a group of students nominated by the Peace faculty and staff and chosen to represent Peace College to prospective students and their families. Some of their responsibilities include giving tours of the campus, hosting students overnight, and answering their questions. Besides providing insight into student life at Peace, this selected group of students also attend receptions for the Board of Trustees and the Board of Visitors.

Peace Student Business Association

Peace Student Business Association, formally known as Future Business Women, is an organization that gives Peace women an opportunity to use their business skills. This organization helps students plan careers in business such as accounting, personnel, management, sales, and information processing. PSBA plans activities to visit different corporations in the area. Speakers also come on campus from various companies to talk about how to have a successful business. Meredith Royall says, "the speakers help promote their club so more Peace students will become involved."

SEAC

SEAC stands for the Student Environmental Action Coalition. Each year SEAC is in charge of putting a recycling bin on each floor of the residence halls. At Christmas SEAC puts a "Tree for the Birds" in front of Belk. This tree helps the birds during the cold weather. The club's main goal is to keep Peace and the environment clean and healthy.

Young Democrats

The Young Democrats participate in local campaigns and keep up with the national campaigns as well. Many students at Peace will be voting for the first time their freshman year, and becoming involved in politics with their peers enables them to make intelligent choices when they get to the polls. In addition, students attend debates and rallies when national candidates stop in the capital city on the campaign trail.

College Republicans

College Republicans, much like the Young Democrats, have the chance to become involved with politics during their college years. Because Peace is located within walking distance of the state capital, students can attend legislative sessions or hear campaign speeches of local and national candidates. Depending upon the election year schedule, both clubs organize their activities with political activism in mind. Often political interests grow into careers for the future.

SWAT or the Student Wellness Advocacy Team are concered with promoting quality health care for Peace College students. Their goals are to encourage healthy lifestyles by reviewing suggestions and complaints. They review policies and procedures and plan health education activities. Working with the Director of Student Health Services, this group acts as liaisons between the student body and the administration. They help orient freshmen on the health services Peace provides.

BACCHUS is a student-run organization that helps educate the campus and students about the resposibile use of alcohol. During the week of Fall Fest, BACCHUS sponsors Alcohol Awareness Week. Each day a different theme promotes the students' awareness of alcohol use. One day in particular is designated as Dead Day, in which the students dress in all black, pretending to be dead from an alcohol-related accident. Often this day has a powerful positive impact on student's attitudes and habits.

Minority Student Association

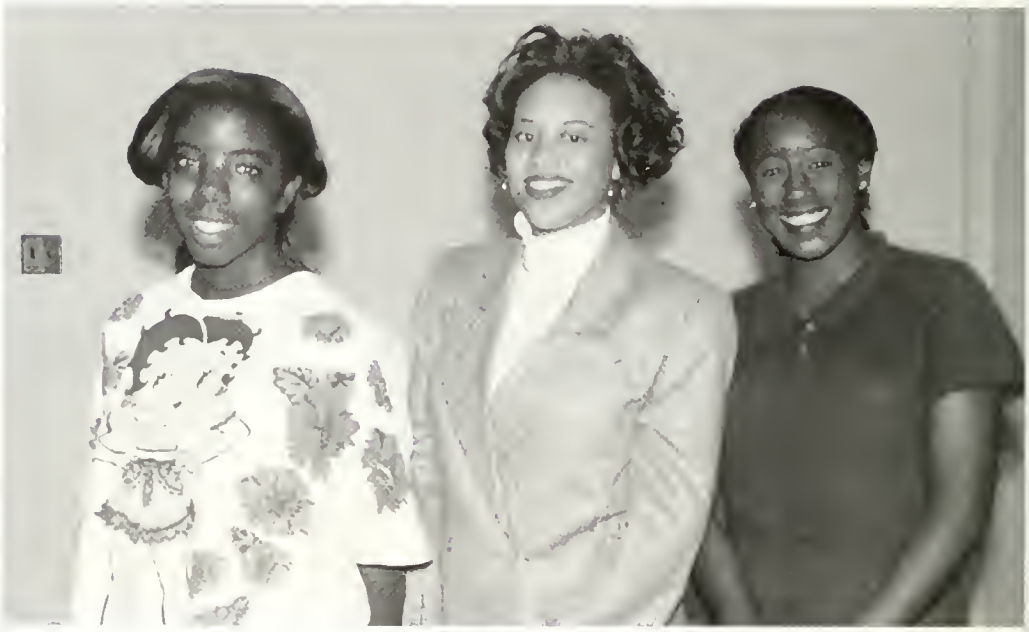
The Minority Student Association serves the student body with a better understanding of holidays like Martin Luther King, Jr. in January and Black History month in February. Each year a commerative chapel service is held on Martin Luther King, Jr. Day in rememberance of Martin Luther King, Jr. who did so much for the people of this nation. The MSA meets monthly to discuss the clubs goals and community service projects for the semester. This year they began a new tradition by denoting one night in the dining hall as an Ethnic Feast. This gave the students a chance to try foods from several different countries and to share in a small part of the tradtions of the rest of the world.



Kelsie McCoy , Wendy Nelson , Bea Hayden.

Non-Traditional Students

Non-traditional students are adult women who are returning to college to further their education at Peace College. Many have to juggle the demands of a family, work, and school. Traditionally, these students do remarkably well and are serious, dedicated, and determined to get their degrees. They add insightful and mature perspectives to any class discussion and are an asset to our student body. Located in the heart of downtown Raleigh, Peace offers working women a convenient location to re-enter the academic world.

Recurring Dream: Leaving Home

I set out early,
a staccato of light rain on the windshield.
Street lamps glow out of the morning fog like blank faces on the edge of a crowd Familiar alleys retreat and shadow.
I drive main street slowly past store fronts, deserted parks, whole neighborhoods half-concealed in mist that whips and curls around the brick.
But houses give way to meadow, each huddled figure farther than the last.
Clouds dissipate with nothing to cling to.
I turn to the highway, straight and grey for miles.

Rachel Cleverly

Feather

deathly feathers with the leathers cascading from his solemn breath of nightime with the cries to the god of a statue made by poor deathly hands and the music of the sounds of feathers
cascading from his tears.

"When I see new girls come in and want to be a part of the institution it's very special to see them take the pledge that I took, and I hope that it will come to mean as much to them as it does to me," says Stevie McFadden.

Stevie McFadden, (right) says, "I think the [Honor Code] ceremony is very important because it is a long-standing tradition, and it's part of our history here at Peace College."

Judiciary Board

Ruling Hands

The Judiciary Board, a long-standing tradition at Peace College, helps enfoce the Honor Code.

The Judiciary Board, a group of students who help enforce the Honor Code and handle problems that arise, meets once a rule has been violated and the problem reported to Dean Edwards. The group listens to each side of the story and takes appropriate action when necessary.

Made up of class officers, student government officers, two faculty members, a representative from the Resident Directors, Dean Edwards, and other elected students, the board consists of many different representatives from the Peace College family.

Meredith Royall, a student who ran for election to be on the board, said, "I wanted to get involved in school, and I've always enjoyed student government. I hadn't heard of the Judiciary Board, but I knew it was a tradition at Peace that upholds the Honor Code."

> I hadn't heard of the Judiciary Board, but I knew it was a tradition at Peace to uphold the Honor Code.
> -Meredith Royall

One of the activities of the board is the Honor Code ceremony. Stevie McFadden said, "It is important because after you have attended Peace you realize how important the honor code is and it becomes a way of life."

Christa Smith, another member of the board, said, "As a freshman I didn't understand the magnitude of what I was doing, but now that I am on the other side of the table I realize how much the Honor Code is an important part of Peace."

When the Honor Code is broken, Christa Smith (third from right) says, "I feel sad [that the rules have been broken], but nobody is perfect. I just hope I don't see [the student] again."

Student Life At Peace

College life is at first new and sometimes frightening and then can become overwhelming before it becomes rewarding. On a continuum of perils, joys, sorrows, and thrills, we have each other. Living together, crying together, and studying together-- we Search for the bonds of friendship that will last forever. We find those bonds at Peace. In residence life, we learn to share, to be quiet when our roommate is asleep, to pick up our side of the room, and to be available always to listen and give advice. Most Peace College students will say that the fun of college life begins when classes are over for the day and snack time begins in the dorm. Late night pizza parties, raids at Wal-Mart in the middle of the night, and practical jokes are all part of the Peace College Experience students never forget.

Parents' Weekend, a tradition at Peace College, was held October 6-8, 1995. Parents get to meet faculty and see the campus through their daughters' eyes. This year parents, faculty, staff, students, and alumnae enjoyed a barbeque on front campus and entertainment by the Embers in the afternoon. On Sunday students and parents attended a special service held in the Chapel.

Fall Fest/Fall Cocktail

This year's Fall Fest began on Monday, October 30 with a midnight relay which the sophomores won. On Tuesday the freshmen won the theme dinner competition where students dressed up in their favorite Halloween costumes. On Wednesday the twenty-four hour scavenger hunt began, and students had to find unusual items from all over Raleigh. After much searching, the sophomores won this event. On Thursday, the juniors collected the most food for the Food Drive. Friday night at a bonfire on Peace Beach, students earned points by the number of guests they brought. The sophomores won this event. Fall Fest ended on November 4, 1995 with the Fall Cocktail at the Elk's Lodge. The theme this year was "Ain't Going Down Till The Sun Comes Up." Students and their dates danced and enjoyed mingling with friends.

Marci Sample shines as she mingles with her friends.

The YMCA dance is still popular twenty years later.

"An Affair To Remember"

Each year Peace celebrates "the rites of spring" with a spring formal. Students get excited about finding the perfect dress and then a date. The spring formal was held off-campus at the Holiday Inn State Capital. Before arriving at the dance, many of the girls and their dates went out to dinner. Once they arrive at the dance, they enjoy seeing their friends with their dates and dancing to the music provided by a DJ. The spring formal is a favorite tradition the girls look forward to each year.

The girls and their dates gather after lunch for an afternoon of games and fun in the gym

Spring Fling

On Sunday after the Spring Formal Peace holds a Spring fling where the girls and their dates play games on Peace Beach. Due to the rain last year, the spring fling was held inside. Peace students and their dates enjoyed competitions such as tug of war, three-legged races, or just socializing.

Peace Holidays

Celebrating the holidays at Peace has become a tradition for Peace students, faculty, and staff. Whether it be the costume contest at Halloween or Secret Santas at Christmas, Peace always finds a way to bring the holiday fun into everyone's life. At Halloween students dress up for trick or treating, wearing costumes ranging from the Wizard of Oz to their favorite TV characters.

During the Thanksgiving Chapel service, the PSCA gave appreciation gift baskets to the environmental service staff for all they do to make Peace a beautiful and comfortable place to live.

Christmas, one of the most beautiful holidays at Peace, emphasizes the spiritual focus of the school. Decorations of lights, garland, and red bows, helps everyone to get into the Christmas spirit. In their home away from home, Peace students always celebrate holidays with enthusiasm and creativity.

EAST COAST

Storm's effects lingering

The blizzard of 1996 gave us a late white Christmas and an extra week of vacation. For many of the Peace students, getting back to school proved to be a difficult adventure. In parts of Virginia, up to two feet of snow fell merely days before classes were to resume. For only the second time in history, North Carolina State University, UNC-Chapel Hill and a few other colleges cancelled classes. This is a rare treat for students who normally are made to brave the cold and dreary weather in order to make it to class. Even after the white stuff began thawing, Peace still remained a "sheet of ice" as students became snowbound by the "black ice" in the parking lot. While most were still huddling in their homes for warmth, students dodged ice patches and snow mounds to trample their way back to reality--the classroom.

NINETEEN NINETY-SIX!

Something Old.....

Santa Claus makes an appearance at the annual Christmas dinner held just before th winter break.

Peace College basketball served as a means to bring faculty and students together.

While the history of Peace College continues to evolve, so do many of the ideals that we hold so dear: the traditions. As Peace changes into a four-year college, the traditions have become harder to recognize. Although some traditions have disappeared, others came in, not to replace them, but to enhance the spirit of Peace College.

The Peace ring itself underwent great change as those women who chose to continue as baccalaureate candidates turned in their "PC" rings for rings with the school's ensignia engraved on the onyx.

With the introduction of Peace Pride last year, students gained a mascot to identify with the college. The athletic program will soon add intercollegiate teams, something Peace once had.

Even though the face of Peace may be changing, her heart remains true to the students who will bring her into the present to create tradtions for the future.

Father/Daughter Day and Mother/Daughter Weekend

Mother/Daughter Weekend was held on October 28 - 29. The mothers and daughters enjoyed a luncheon on Saturday and brunch on Sunday. They were entertained while playing the mother/daughter game together and had an opportunity to view Peace College's fall drama production of Uncommon Women and Others .

Father/Daughter Day was held on February 20. Fathers spent a fun-filled afternoon bowling with their daughters. That evening the two enjoyed dinner and a night of dancing in Belk Dining Hall.

Peace Girls Participate in Club Sports

Since Peace does not have many intercollegiate sports, one alternative for students is to play club sports. The soccer team from this and other small colleges play in the Capital Area Soccer League against other adult women teams. They play their games on Saturday after two days of practice during the week in both fall and spring seasons.

The coach, Judy Lewis, got involved with coaching because she also plays on a team in the league. She prevents a conflict of interest by not playing when Peace plays against her team.

She said, "The team as a whole is a hard working team. It's a club sport, so it does have requirements, but it's an extra curricular activity and gives girls an opportunity to have fun."

Liza Bruton, captain of the club soccer team added "I like the sport and exercise. It also helps me to concentrate on my homework, have fun, and meet new friends. The exercise helps me get rid of restlessness and helps me manage time."

The exercise helps me get rid of restlessness and helps me manage time. -Liza Bruton

The club basketball team also played in a recreational league in Raleigh and follows basically the same practice schedule as the soccer team, with their season being in the winter. "In the beginning the team was not completely comfortable with each other," said Kim Ramer.

"At first we had never played together, and it took awhile to adjust, but eventually we learned each other's strong points, and our game really improved."

There are advantages to club sports, said Ramer. "People who aren't aggressive enough for varsity sports can play club sports and feel more comfortable and have fun."

SWIMMING

Skills in swimming are an important part of the physical education requirements at Peace College. First, upon coming to Peace College, students are required to pass a swimming test. Then, spnsored by the PSRA, the intramural sports program offers students a chance to participate in several sports including swimming. Students may also take P.E. classes such as lifesaving and water aerobics. Swimming is also encouraged for fun. Lifeguards are on duty during pool hours to ensure the safety of swimmers who choose to come to the pool for exercise, fun, or leisure.

The pool is a great place to hang out with friends.

Feelin' Fit At Peace

The Peace College Experience, allows us to Express ourselves in a variety of ways. Some of us dance, bending and moving gracefully to the rhythm of the music. Some of us paint and sculpt, weaving our personalities into art forms and on canvas. Some of us sing, making our voices musical instruments that bring pleasure to all who hear. Finally, on the Continuum of self-expression, some of us immerse ourselves in characters and dramatize our feelings in the performing arts. Whatever the medium, Peace College students find their voices and learn to express themselves as confident, intelligent, and sensitive young women.

PEACE

The Peace Pacers Dance Company was composed of sixteen Peace students who enjoy performing and choreographing tap, jazz, modern, and ballet. The dance company's director, Katherine Arnott, helps to direct performances during both the fall and spring semesters. Like the Tennis Team and the Chamber Singers, the Peace Pacers are yet another performing group always found in the spot light. They performed this year during Christmas Chapel, out in the community and at local churches. The students themselves chose to create and choreograph numbers for the final spring performace. Rehersals prior to the final performance lasted several hours a night, sometimes well past midnight, for perfection of the performance to take place. The dance company's work was evident from the outstanding show they put on for a full house in the recital hall during the weekend of April 27th. For all of your hard work, thanks!

PEACE COLLEGE CHOIR

The Peace College Choir fills Peace Chapel with beautiful singing every Thursday. Dressed in the traditional burgundy choir robes, the choir also performs pieces in Latin. The choir is joined the North Carolina State Varsity Men's Glee Club during their Spring Concert. Jim Smith, the choir's director, occasionlly sings solos for chapel and says he enjoys working with the choir because there is a wide range of experience from beginning choral students to advanced. Stephanie Blott described Mr. Smith as, "Very understanding and very talented but also very driven." The choir is a devoted group but they also delight in their music. Carolyn Lee said, " I joined (the choir) because I heard it was a lot of fun - and it is!"

CHAMBER SINGERS

The Peace College Chamber Singers are a talented group of women who devote part of their busy schedules to perform locally and even internationally. On the local level, the chamber singers have performed for local churches and civic groups. They also give a Christmas concert on campus. Over Chrismas, the Chamber Singers travelled to Asheville, North Carolina to serenade tourists at the Biltmore House. Kimberly Chappell enjoyed singing with the orchestra of different professionals during the Christmas concert but said the weekend trip to the Bilmore House brought the group closer together. Over the summer they will represent North Carolina at the Millenium Festival in Austria which is a thousand year celebration. The group will also perform in Munich, Germany, Florence and Venice, Italy, Salzburg, Vienna, and Luzerne, Switzerland. Their six concerts will include a variety of music from early chants to classical and popular pieces. Heather Hatcher said, "I am very excited about going to Europe and I am anxious to see Vienna because the Sound of Music was filmed there." The Chamber Singers are thankful to Mr. Smith for his dedication. Heather Hatcher said, " He's very encouraging and pushes us to do our best." Kimberly Chappell said of the Chamber Singers, "We are family."

A Phoenix Too Frequent

Last spring, Peace College presented A Phoenix Too Frequent by Christopher Fry April 6-8, 1995. The play was directed by Cynthia Mitchell, who states that she was having some difficulty last winter coming up with a play for the spring production. With thoughts of spring in her head, she came across the acting addition of A Phoenix Too Frequent lying on the top ledge of the stairs in her house. Cynthia had always liked the play and as she read it for the second time since 1995, she realized it was exactly what she wanted to direct.

The play consisted of a small cast. Anne Howell, pictured left, who was in her second semester at Peace College, played "Doto." The role of "Dynamene", pictured on opposite page, was played by Carrie Mayer, who graduated from Peace in May. Derrick Ivey played "Tegeus-Chromis." Derrick is the theater coordinator for the Arts Center, a member of Man Bites Dog Theater company, and a principle dancer with Killan Manning.

The play was taken from a (Jeremy Taylor) story who had addapted it from Petronius. It was performed without an intermision and was a huge success.

Uncommon Women and Others

Mary Kathryn Tyson as Muffet, Jennifer Lynn Coleman as Samantha, Mary Elizateth Holtzman as Rita, Nikita Dwan Smith as Susie Friend, Pilar Iona D'Asto as Holly, Jennifer Price as Kate, and Maja Elzbieta Palej as Leilah conclude singing a school song performed for their fathers on the father/daughter day!

These women reunite to reminisce on their college days. They update one another about their present life situations with regard to career, family friends, and life in general.

Uncommon Women and Others, the drama department's fall play, was dedicated to the memory of Richard P. Rottschaefer, drama professor for 10 years. This Pulitzer Prize and Tony Award winning play, written by playwright Wendy Wasserstein, is set at Mount Holyoke, an all-women's college. Graduates of the school join for a five year reunion at which they reminisce about their college years.

Although quite provocative and breath-takingly shocking, "the play is about accepting ambiguity," according to Director Kenny Gannon. He selected this particular production over some others because he was "looking for something to highlight the actors' talents, relevant to Peace and something that could contribute to life here." The play opened to an enthusiastic audience, who gave it glowing reviews. Peace is fortunate to have the talents of Dr. Kenny Gannon as theater director and teacher as well as the many talented students who dedicate numerous hours to campus performances.

Mary Elizabeth Holtzman and Jennifer Lynn Coleman, playing their roles of Rita and Samantha, pretend to be males.

Mary Kathryn Tyson puts on the final make-up touches and curls her hair backstage.

When our parents left us in August, they said the typical parent things: "Do your best." "We're proud of you." "You can do it!" From these encouraging words, we were then left on our own to Achieve the expectations we and our parents had. We then began a process of trial and error, studying more than we ever had before, hoping to reap rewards for our efforts. We were on a Continuum of striving for the best, sometimes succeeding, sometimes failing. But as we persevered, the rewards did come. Some of us were on the Dean's List, some of us were named to Who's Who. Many of us were in honors organizations and some of us achieved individual accolades. Whether as individuals or as a part of a group, the honors were well-deserved and ones that will be cherished forever.

Leadership Scholars

What is a leadership scholar? Each applicant must prove outstanding achievement in the areas of extracurricular activities, volunteer services, and church participation while keeping a high level of academics. After a series of interviews with faculty and students, Dr. Janice Edwards offers scholarships to those who would best represent this leadership scholarship.

When the recipient arrives in the fall, she becomes greatly involved in campus activities which interests her, such as PSGA, PSCA and the volunteer organizations. The leadership scholars do not meet regularly but meet several times over the semester to discuss their involvement and the goals they achieve.

Haley Hall says that it is really nice to be recognized as leaders. Carrie Bryant says that as a leadership scholar she is able to work with business people and see how they demonstrate leadership qualities in the workplace.

College Scholars

The Peace College Scholars and Honors Program offers academic opportunities for scholars and honors students through honors classes, honors projects in required or elective courses, independent study, attendance at conferences for undergraduate scholars or honors students, and membership in National Honors societies for eligible students.

1995-96: Scholars and Honors students were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Briggs at a cookout sponsored by the Honors Program. Two Honors students accompanied the Scholars/Honors Coordinator to the annual North Carolina Honors Council Conference, held at Mt. Olive College, and two students attended the annual Southern Regional Honors Council conference in Norfolk, Virginia. For the first time in history of Peace College, a senior honors student participated in the National Research Conference for Undergraduate Students, presenting the results of a psychological research project. The 1996 conference was held in Asheville, N.C. During the fall semester, 1995, Scholars and Honors students were invited to attend a series of informal "Brown bag" luncheon discussions featuring Peace college faculty members and focused on topical issues.

Following fall and spring tapping ceremonies, first semester students with Grade Point Average of 3.75 or higher and second or third semester students with grade Point Average of 3.50 or higher were inducted in an April ceremony into Phi Theta Kappa International Honors Society for Two Year Colleges.

They are as follows: Lea Ann Oaks, Adrienne Eure, Fran Miller, Annette Conard, Julie Passmore, Lindsey Tyler.

Teaching Award

Each year a faculty member who has demostrated excellence both in and out of the classroom, is honored with the McCormick Distinguished Teaching Award. This person, who has earned numerous outstanding achievements, displayed a genuine interest in the students' personal and intellectual growth.

She must also continue to take classes in the language into the second semester. Peace's chapter of Sigma Delta Mu is known as the Beta Chapter of North Carolina. Dr. Anne Fountain, sponsor of Sigma Delta Mu, plans enriching activities throughout the year such as the International Festival to expose students to not only Latin American history but cultures world wide.

Outstanding Sophomores have been chosen by the student body based on their outstanding contributions to life at Peace through their academic, social and personal qualities as well as their leadership abilities. These young women represent some of the best Peace College has to offer. During the presentation, each young woman was introduced by one of their peers, usually one of their good friends. Through many memories and tears, each presenter reminded us of each Outstanding Sophomore's commendable qualities and told us an anecdote or two that made us smile.

She is intelligent, beautiful, and one of the est friends I have. Her devotion is outstand-ng whether it be to her family, friends, her hurch, or Peace College. We have truly been lessed to have her among us. I can only hope or all of you that you gain a friend like her."

--by Ginna Bernardo

"She is a close friend of mine and I am proud to have her as one of my confidants. She is loved by everyone who knows her for her gentle sense of humor and her determination. I have never met anyone who could read my heart like she does."

--by Heather Medd

Hannah Whitfield
"Her heart of gold is something that she denies, but others continually reap the benefits of. The mere knowledge that her door, her ears, and her comforting words are always there is something that I rely on daily."

Miss Peace

Elected by her peers, Miss Peace is an honorable and outstanding sophomore who displays excellent academic qualities and also commits her time to community services.

"Being Miss Peace is the most wonderful gift any Peace College student can receive. It is a true honor to be elected by my peers to hold such a distinguished title. Thank you to everyone for giving me this opportunity. I have yet to encounter anything in my life that has meant more!"

Ginna Bernardo

Honors

In Remembering the Peace College Experience one remembers many things. It all began with the acceptance letter and all too soon moving day arrived. We then committed our lives to the honor pledge and to our first year academic courses. Parents' weekend came in no time, and we shagged to the Embers. Christmas and exams descended quickly and then it was time for our long awaited vacation. The thoughts of Spring Break lingered in our heads while preparing for mid-terms. Shopping for the perfect gown to wear for graduation. That moment became our focus for the spring of our sophomore year. After we were awarded our diplomas, we formed a ring around the fountain, shed a few tears , saying one last good-bye. We will remember Peace forever.

From going out to eat or shopping, Peace students Support the local shopping malls and restaurants. Often students treat themselves to a night out with friends for dinner and a movie. The personal ads represent the Continuum of friendships formed here. Peace College students celebrate the comraderie that they have aquired during their time at Peace College.

STUNT NIGHT 1996

Stunt Night is an annual competition between the freshman and sophomore classes. The freshman class stunt was about two freshmen on their way back to Peace from a trip to the store and along the way they pick up several Peace people, including Dr. McLennan and Ann Laird Jones. When they arrive back at Peace they join hands around the fountain on front campus while singing the Alma Mater.

The sophomore class stunt was about past, present, and future times at Peace College. The sophomore class performed a skit about (EEO's) Educational Enrichment Opportunities, which were 25 hours of mandatory community service for all students before the end of the year during 1995-96. Skits also included impersonation scenes with David Chappell as "the maintenance man,"also included David McLennan (Professor of Interpersonal Communication), as well as the annual Lawn Party at NCSU and the Spring Formal. All in all, both classes did a great job, but by a slim margin, the Sophomore Class won! Congratulations to everyone who participated!

The girls scamper after realizing they did not meet the required EEO credit hours for the 1995-96 year.

SOPHOMORES

These girls think it is fun to clog up the toilets so David Chappell (the maintenance man) to fix it for them and hear the echoing of a male's voice on the hall.

George Anne McElveen sings her heart out while preparing for David (the maintenance man) to come fix her soap dish.

Freshmen

Three freshmen girls pick up "Ann Jones "and Dr. McLennan on their way back from the store.

George Anne McElveen, as Dr. McLennan, bends down to pick up a dropped pen as the girls' mouths drop.

Katy Hill, Nicole McGhee and other Peace girls are having fun at the Spring Formal.
